as we see it

■ An Editorial in Three Quotes:

"Television commercials may have had as much to do with the civil-rights revolution the U.S. has experienced in the last decade as court decisions. Millions of people, in the contrasting poverty of their own surroundings, have seen on their TV screens the material accoutrements of prosperous middle-class living, held out as things which they should desire, which were available, and which everyone might reasonably expect to get. The one inescapable message of all commercials is: Here is a world that is attractive and that you should live in. . . . Insistently they say, this is real, this is available, this is for sale, and you should have it. . . . I suspect that is the most important and influential message television has carried to a large segment of its audience during the last 10 years."—FCC Commissioner Lee Loewinger.

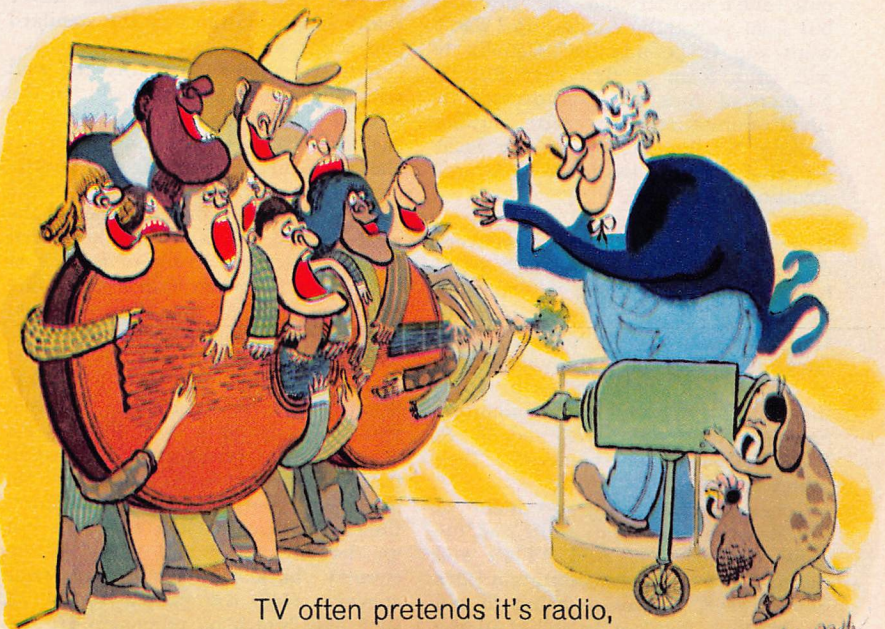

■ "As an aide in the Head Start program, I visited the home of one of the deprived youngsters in my group. Contrasted with the frayed upholstery and worn-out furniture was a large new TV set. TV has permeated even the ghetto. For most white toddlers, a TV situation comedy provides a view of their own daily lives at their funniest. But this black child saw only glimpses of a life he would never lead."—Richard Tilden.

If it is true, then, that television has "educated" America's Negro minority into stepping up its drive for equality, it seems reasonable to expect that the same medium can help to "educate" the entire American community into a wholehearted acceptance of this principle of human dignity. To some extent it does that now. We'd like to see it do more, for . . .

■ "Human history has become more and more a race between education and catastrophe."—H.G. Wells.

DOWN IN 'THE HARD LARD BELT...'

TV often pretends it's radio, and country music fills the air

By William Price Fox

The twang of down-home country music and the Glory Road emotions of gospel singing long ago reeled their way out of the American Southland to affect the musical tastes of the entire Nation. Flatt and Scruggs, performers of the music for both the movie "Bonnie and Clyde," and for the television show The Beverly Hillbillies, are known to millions, while gospel is the true backbone of rhythm and blues, and, through it, rock. TV GUIDE recently sent William Price Fox, Southern-born author (his book of short stories, "Southern Fried Plus Six," was published by Lippincott last month) back home to see what was happening with the music on Southern television—Ed.

A South Carolina, North Carolina or Georgia housewife cooking breakfast for the 6-o'clock field hands doesn't watch television; she listens to it. She listens to the morning prayer, the morning recitation, the cotton-and-hog reports and the back-to-back straight hours of steel-edged country music.

Trusting the local station not to spring a fire-eating kangaroo or a tap-dancing owl on her while she's → in the kitchen, she fries her side meat and watches the fire under her simmering grits and coffee. If there are any surprises, the announcer will flag them with: "All right, little lady, now don't go rushing the biscuits, but I got something coming up I don't want you to be missing." Usually it will be a team of first-year Future Farmers of America girls, dressed in silver miniature Rangerette outfits, singing "Cielito Lindo," or the local 9-year-old baton twirler and fancy-strutting champion.

Over the years the TV producers down here in the "hard lard belt" have learned the facts of morning television programming. Simply stated: It should sound like radio. Down here they want the wife secure in her kitchen so that when products like Martha White Flour, Ballantine Sausage, Red Eel Meal and J. P. Stevens Overalls are mentioned, they aren't forgotten.

Cohen Williams, the president of the Martha White flour mills and famous for his 5:45 A.M. "Flatt and Scruggs and the Foggy Mountain Boys Show," says, "If you're going to sell biscuit mix, you got to sell it in the morning. You got to sell it to the biscuit makers. I got my idea from 'Pappy' Lee O'Daniel and his Light Crust Doughboys. I figured if that old side-winder could get to be governor of Texas selling corn meal, I could sure as hell sell me some biscuit mix. I been doing it too, you hear?"

Cohen Williams, who headquarters close to the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, is smart. So is Arthur Smith over in Charlotte. I got a tank of gas and two quarts of oil and drove over.

Off stage, Arthur Smith, who at 44 is the big gun of North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia country music, is easy to talk to and listen to. Turned out we grew up within five miles of each other in Camden, S.C., fished the same holes, swam the same eddies, and he and his friends used to come out to our roadhouse and honky-tonk and eat my dad's barbecue. I asked him why country music, except for the morning shows, had never really caught on the way the standard pop songs had.

Arthur leaned back against the wall with his feet up on the desk. To the left of his feet was a picture of Richard Nixon jowled down over a Hammond organ, with Arthur chord-ing his big guitar and smiling. On the other side was a full-figure shot of the white-hatted, fast-gun, poker-faced Col. Tim McCoy. On top of a stack of fan mail a short letter in a trembling hand was signed, "May God bless you Arthur Smith and all the cast . . . A faithful Indiana listener."

Arthur smiled. "I'll tell you why. What's the first thing you do when you pull up to a red light?" He answered the question. "You switch the country-music station over to pops. Everyone wants you to think they're swingers. Then they get out on the open road and they cut the country back on. You read your surveys. Half the people swear all they ever watch on television are the news flashes and the Bell Telephone Hour."

Along with his daily TV show and his big weekly specials—which guest-star such people as Nixon, E. G. Marshall, and the sage of Charlotte, Harry Golden—Arthur Smith is one of the hardest-working deacons of his church. He likes church work and he takes it very seriously.

"It's hard talking to people these days and it's getting harder. I walk by two cars parked in the driveway and into a fellow's four-bath, air-conditioned, wall-to-wall home, and when we start talking about spiritual needs, I mean it gets uphill. But I keep plugging away. My philosophy is to do the best you can with what you have to work with and then walk off. Country music and hymns and entertaining is what I love. That's the best I can do."

As a composer, Arthur Smith does better than that. Since 1946, when he wrote and sold two-and-a-half-million records of "Guitar Boogie," he has written over 150 songs and 60 hymns.

He told me where I could get a good barbecue sandwich and showed me a short cut to Columbia, and he added, "Listen, if you want to hear some really good gospel, go check WOIC. Now there's a crowd that's moving."

As I headed south past the used-car lots, the deep-fry, short-order cafes and the sign "Jesus Is Ready; Are You?" the oil pressure began dropping and my engine picked up a valve click.

It's 90 miles from Charlotte to Columbia, and on the clear day I drove it I counted 86 local hillbilly radio shows. The high-decibel squonk-squonk fiddle sound, which some say goes back to the Depression, when the fiddler replaced his broken bow string with screen wire, drowned out the ball games and the talk shows. The thousand strings of Mantovani, coming in on a weak signal from Atlanta, sounded like the background music at Forest Lawn. I stopped once for gas and twice for oil and arrived in Columbia at noon. Station WOIC, the all-Negro-programmed radio station, is on a no-name road 100 yards from the Seaboard Coast Line railroad. Outside the unpainted concrete-block house, more than 150 musicians, singers, deacons and promoters were lined up in the hot sun waiting their turn to be on the Sunday gospel show.

Inside, the Farewell Gospel Singers finished their last number, and the Silver Trumpets of Columbia slid under the mike with "When the Roll Is Called in Glory." The song trailed off, the hummers hummed and the deacon stepped in. He was short and heavy, dressed in tartan shorts, Hush Puppies, no socks, a gold Hollywood velveteen pullover shirt and wrap-around shades as big as playing cards. To his left, a hummer had his eyes closed. Someone said, "Look at that cat. Is he blind?" Another voice: "Man, no . . . he's just cool."

The deacon intoned, "If you're home doing your daily chores or strapped down on your bed of affliction, or behind prison bars, this song is for you." The hummers swayed in and took up the comforting chorus of "Standing in the Funeral Parlor Looking Down on the Face of a Friend."

As the song ended, the deacon delivered his mini-sermon: "The Lord's got a whole load of troubles riding his shoulders these days. Got no time to reach us all. Besides that, the Lord—He takes His time." He's in closer now, louder. "Besides that, the Lord, He ain't no hurry-up Lord. He waits! Yes, He waits and He does it right. The wife shouting 'Gimmee, gimmee, gimmee' and complaining how she's got to have something from the store right now and here you are up to your neck in bills." A knowing sigh and a low "Amen." "You tell that gal to wait. Tell her the Lord moves at His own speed. . . . You tell her I said it!" The chorus leader hums in, "Well-done, deacon."

"And now, for our friends out at the Crossroads Store who got some nice, easy prices this week on pork chops, okra, tomatoes, neck bones and collard greens, we want to sing . . ."

Cecil Derrick, the program director, says WOIC is the hottest thing in the Carolinas. "Negroes don't want to be listening to Lawrence Welk and that Muzak mess; neither do the whites. We play good music. On top of that we're the greatest baby sitter in the world. The babies get with that strong beat, and the mothers keep the sta—→ tion on all day. When they turn it off, those little kids wake up and raise hell. Man, we've got a captive audience. I'll tell you something else—lot of your big stars are going to be coming right out of here. They move over to Augusta television and then they get a chance at the nationals. That's where singer James Brown came from. You ought to check it out . . ."

The auto mechanic on the Augusta road ladled in three quarts of oil and said I needed a lot more than a ring-and-valve job. "Friend, if I were you, I'd get shed of this coffee pot."

In Augusta, Steve Manderson's Negro gospel TV show follows the same format as WOIC. There is no pay for the singers; only exposure. Manderson, who has albino-white hair and still wears wide trousers and one-button rolled suit jackets, told me it was the only live four-hour Negro gospel show in the world.

He led me into the studio. The Spirits of Harmony were unplugging their electrical equipment as the Trees of Light, a fine close-harmony group, moved in under the cameras. Up front was "Wild Willy" White Jr., a truck driver out of Waynesboro, Ga. Wild Willy is a dancing screamer and you can get a sore throat and a backache just watching him. He shrieked and tore his clothes through "IF YOU NEED IT, GOD GOT IT."

The 68 counties that WJBF reaches love him, and the fan mail pours in. The song ended, and while Willy was wiping down the sweat and catching his breath, Deacon Noah White, a Pullman-coach cleaner, intoned a short sermon sandwiched around the announcement that "The Trees of Light will be at Pine Street Elementary School on Route 1 on Wednesday . . ."

The Trees finished up and headed for the Coke machine as the Dixie Jubiliers, a hard-rock gospel group, closed in. Featured was 5-foot-1 Shorty Jr., who at 12 is a 9-year veteran. He stomped, wiggled, shrieked and did everything but "The Dog" for the Lord.

Steve Manderson filled me in on how many stars started here: Jim Nabors led the list, quickly followed by Sister Rosetta Tharpe, James Brown, Brenda Lee, Carl Smith and the Byrd Family. I asked who the Byrd Family were and he said they were the greatest white gospel group breathing.

The live Negro show ended and Manderson said the next hour would be a taped series of white gospel singers featuring the Byrd Family.

The first group, the Jones Family—a mother, father and two-daughter combination—came on singing, sharp-eyed and straight at the camera. The group stood in a stiff horseshoe and tried "Where Would I Be Without Jesus?" No Wild Willys or Shorty Jrs. here. The earnest-looking father kept smiling at his guitar while the mother peered to one side as if her biscuits were burning. No one seemed to be listening to the other. Mr. Jones, in a flashy sausage-skin-tight gold mica suit, announced that they were booked up for the next three months, but if anyone was interested in something special, they could be reached at a motel four miles from the Mississippi Petrified Forest.

After the Jones Family came the Byrds (not to be confused with the West Coast folk-rock group). Their backdrop, a simple 5-foot-high hymnal, gave them the appearance of singing from an altar. They were honest, straightforward, hard-singing—and flat. Randy Jr., the son, did the second number. Cocking his head as if he had an earache, he introduced a tuneless song fresh from his own ballpoint: "My Jesus Loves You," a charitable thought supported by bedrock lyrics running, "He loves you . . . friends so true . . . comfort you . . . He is so true . . . and He will see you through."

Manderson nudged me, smiling, "That kid's only 15. He wrote that thing himself."

As I prayed that no one had talked him into an encore, I remembered my father telling me, "A white group ain't got no business doing rain dances, frying catfish or singing gospel."

The last family group was the Lewis Family. The three sisters' and three brothers' second number featured their father, a tall, thin, peaceful-looking man sitting in a rocking chair and talking to the ceiling. His off-key brood gathered around him, humming like pall-bearing archangels, while he folded his hands into "My Time's Running Out—I'm Getting Old." Realizing he had a good thing going, he dedicated the next number to the shut-ins. The children kept humming as the camera dollied in tight on an oil painting of Jesus kneeling in Gethsemane under a red Day-Glo shaft of heavenly light. Papa Lewis read carefully from the Bible.

Talmadge Lewis, who also knows the territory well, waited a few beats and pitched the Talmadge Lewis Motor Company. "Anything from a $50 fishing Ford to a $7000 Lincoln Continental! . . . And remember this! At Talmadge Lewis we won't lie to you to make a sale. This is a must! Yessir, we'll tell you the truth about what you're getting because we know you're telling the truth about what you want."

As the camera focused on his sincere teeth and steadfast eyes and I thought about my deep-breathing lemon parked out back, I wondered if this wasn't the man I was looking for—someone who'd believe that my car was a one-owner and that it had only 10,000 oil-free actual miles on it.

He wasn't.

ANTI-PERSPIRANT

A wet note for the master of dry humor

While Johnny Carson cavorted through his first starring special, "Johnny Carson Discovers Cypress Gardens" (scheduled for Sept. 7, NBC), a horde of very nervous TV personnel sat trembling behind a sky-high pile of insurance forms. Somehow the thought of a "valuable property" trying his hand at dangerous water sports in Florida wasn't their idea of a lark.

They needn't have worried. Carson sailed away in his first attempt at kite skiing; kept pace with pro Buster MacCalla on skis; deftly demonstrated the versatility of a high-speed boat and successfully submerged for an underwater gag sequence. Even after being pulled across the water in a tube at 40 mph, the prince of TV's desk set was still unsunk—and laughing.

In the end it seemed that only the spirit of the special had been slightly dampened. Some of the show looked less funny than planned because Carson handled the aquatic stunts too well. Clowns aren't supposed to look like pros.

THE FLYING ARGENTINE

Despite a bear market for Latin-lover types, Alejandro Rey's fortunes are on the rise

By Fritz Goodwin

The Latin-lover market, like a lot of other things around Hollywood, is not what it used to be. Inevitably there have been times when Alejandro Rey, who didn't come on the scene until 1960, felt he had arrived at least 15 years too late.

It's easy to imagine the flow of executive memoranda that might have been. . . .

"Dear Mr. Mayer: About this new boy from Argentina—first, everybody who's seen the test agrees you have made another great discovery and were 100-percent right when you said sign him. People, and especially those of the fair sex, are delighted by his personality and impressed by the rapid progress he's making with his horsemanship, English, fencing and fox-trot lessons. (He already does an expert tango, I understand.)"

Looking back from the modest pinnacle of his current success as male co-star of The Flying Nun, Alejandro doesn't recall anything remotely like that ever happening to him. "Getting the big studio build-up would have been nice," he mused the other day, strumming his flamenco guitar in the 17th-century luxury of his two-story, Norman-esque apartment.

Competition among Hollywood's

young leading men, then or now, always has been a fierce form of survival game. Going in, all of them have good looks, charm, some degree of talent, and obsessive ambition. Alejandro Rey, stretching to barely 5-feet-11, might have given away a little height, but he made up for it with an unusually rich background of experience, an awesome amount of drive, and superior intelligence.

When in his middle 20's he already was a top star of stage, movies and television in his native Buenos Aires, and almost equally well-known in Spain. Touring across the U.S. under his own name, however, he might as well have been incognito. At one stopover, because he was alone, a Las Vegas headwaiter asked an accommodating Los Angeles couple to share their table with him during the Flamingo's supper show.

His table mates quickly learned that Alejandro (that's Ala-han-dro, by the way; and the Rey is pronounced Ray) was an actor—it's unlikely they could have mistaken the slender, theatrically handsome young man, with his unruly shock of black hair and disarming smile, for anything else—and remembered that some friends of theirs knew a talent agent who spoke Spanish.

Alejandro wrote down agent Walter Kohner's name and wasted no time, reaching Hollywood a day later, in contacting him. The Kohner agency wasted little time either. Within a week it had lined up the new client for a part in the movie "Battle at Bloody Beach," and Alejandro's U.S. career began.

Overnight he became a leading member of the Hollywood Argentine colony—which now consists in its entirety of Alejandro, Fernando Lamas and Linda Cristal of television's High Chaparral. All three expatriates are friendly, with the bond especially close between Alejandro and Miss Cristal. "She is like a sister to me—or while watching early-day television in Buenos Aires. "Now I don't practice them any more because I have this," he said, stroking the guitar softly. Nevertheless, he still does his card tricks with skill and flourish, and usually is willing to perform—although he turned down an invitation to do so on the Joey Bishop TV show. That, he figured, might diminish his serious image as an accomplished actor.

There wasn't always enough food really more like a brother," as he once tried to explain to an unreasonably jealous boy friend of hers. Linda, an unbrotherly-looking girl, is a bubbling fount of admiration for Alejandro.

"He's so sensitive, and terribly talented in so many ways, and I've never found anybody so unselfish and outgoing," she says. "Did you know he writes beautiful poetry, in both English and Spanish? I mean really good poetry too, and I guess he's the best at doing card tricks."

The card tricks he taught himself in the ice box, he confesses, during his early years in Hollywood, but nobody ever associated Alejandro with the sweat-shirt school of young actors. Struggling to pay for English and speech tutoring, plus press agency, out of his own pocket, he still managed to maintain a front that was both dignified and well-tailored.

From the first he enjoyed a considerable reputation as a ladies' man ("Things like that are usually exaggerated, don't you know," he says modestly), but he declined to trade →

A medically sound treatment for most painful hemorrhoids

First, stop the pain. And the itching. Nupercainal® is a unique combination of lubricants plus the most effective topical pain reliever available without a prescription. It relieves pain and itching fast. Provides much longer lasting relief. Nupercainal also soothes inflamed tissue—in turn helps the natural healing process. Moreover Nupercainal facilitates natural movements.

Next, doctors recommend, use common sense. Stay off spicy, highly seasoned foods. Avoid constipation and what causes it. Such as lack of rest and bad eating habits. Stay regular. Sitz baths aid comfort and natural healing.

Above all, use caution. Nupercainal brings relief in most cases and for most types of hemorrhoids. But if symptoms are severe, persistent, frequently recurrent...if there is rectal bleeding...do see your doctor.

Caution, Common Sense, & Nupercainal

upon romance for career purposes. One publicity man he hired kept trying to fix him up with dates with column-mentionable starlets. This brought Alejandro's Spanish-Argentine blood to a quick boil. "Get me a date with Princess Grace of Monaco, and I'll go through with it for the publicity. Otherwise, I'll make my own arrangements," he stormed, and he fired the publicist.

Dating games were suspended during a recent two-year period when Alejandro was married, divorced, remarried and divorced—all to and from one girl, Cristina Roberto. She being the daughter of one of Argentina's most noted actors, Eduardo Rudi, the play-by-play on this game of conjugal seesaw stirred much wider fan interest there than here. Pending their second and presumably final Mexican divorce, Cristina Rey was back home in Buenos Aires, where Alejandro has been getting a bad press since he took an oath of U.S. citizenship last year.

His professional fortunes have been on the steady if gradual rise since a 1963 guest appearance in a Naked City episode won him honors at the Cannes Film Festival and his subsequent co-starring role on the Slattery's People series.

At the moment he's looking forward to his second season with Sally Field in The Flying Nun, genuinely happy that it gives him the chance to do a high comedy variation on the heavy-breathing, eye-smoldering Latin-lover style of earlier days. Beyond this show and the hypothetical seven years he's committed to it, who knows? "I'd like to try directing and also to do a play on Broadway," he says. Whatever the future offers, he's preparing for it diligently with continued English-diction coaching; two nights weekly at a public school course in speed reading; and daily lessons, followed by hours of practice, on the ever-absorbing guitar. ## Papel Visit Poses TV Problems

Pope Paul's impending visit to Bogota, Colombia, has touched off a frantic effort by Italian, Spanish, Colombian and U.S. TV interests to set up make-shift facilities for beaming video coverage of the visit via satellite to Europe, North and Latin America. Coming late in August, when the U.S. networks will be in the throes of shifting political-convention crews and paraphernalia to Chicago from Miami, the Papal mission will give TV newsmen a first-class diversionary headache. "Maybe we should be thankful," one networker sighed, "that the first manned Apollo flight with live TV camera aboard has been put off until September. If it had come off in August, as originally planned, I think we'd have jumped out the window."

If any were needed, New York's educational channel 13 could produce documentary evidence of what happened one night last week when a band of beaded, bearded hippies stormed its studios, roughing up station personnel and taking over a panel-discussion show to which they objected, dealing with their "underground press." The hippie invasion, replete with obscenities was broadcast live and was tape-recorded. Police summoned to the scene nabbed seven of the intruders. Ex-astronaut John Glenn, who had been interviewed a few minutes before it all started, commented: "And they say there's violence on commercial television!"

Despite their outrage over the Emmy-show kiss-off of public-affairs awards last May, at least two of the three network news departments won't bolt the Emmy competition next year. A TV Academy subcommittee voted down, 8-3, a proposal by CBS News president Richard S. Salant that the electronic journalism awards simply be abolished because they are "not meaningful." Academy officials saved the day by promising in 1969 to give news awards separate and "adequate" attention on the Emmy show. Salant, who boycotted the awards once before says he'll "wait and see" what the awards setup will be next year before he nominates any CBS news programs. CBS, whose turn it is to air the 1969 ceremonies, is chary of a repetition of the recent NBC-aired Emmy fiasco and still has not yet decided whether to telecast the show.

The Federally created Corporation for Public Broadcasting, stymied for lack of funds from Congress to begin serious programming operation, may get none before 1969. The House is considering a bill giving educational TV stations about $4 million for facilities but cutting off the new CPB without a penny, apparently for economy reasons. Public-TV forces pin surviving hopes on the Senate's caring enough to tack on a CPB appropriation. If that fails to come about, much of the steam will die out of the Public-TV idea.

RERUN TIME

One good thing about reruns with The Avengers—we get back the Peel instead of the lemon.

N. Stanley
Long Beach, Cal.

It's bad enough that "rerun season" begins long before summer does, but couldn't the networks move their Monday shows to Tuesday, Tuesday to Wednesday, etc.? Thus those who missed certain programs all winter because of other commitments could watch them during the summer.

Beatrice S. Bokert
Staten Island, N.Y.

SMITH DID IT

It was the brilliantly talented director of The Wild Wild West art department, William Smith, not I, who designed and rendered the impressive falcon cannon illustrations on the right of your double spread ["Dastardly Devices of WWW," June 1].

NO ENTHUSIAST HE

No matter how they try to hoke them up, beauty contests remain essentially cheap, crass, mawkish and intolerably boring.

William Donnelly
Tulsa, Okla.

VIOLENCE ON TV

Programs of murder and horror should be quickly taken off TV and replaced by good family shows and comedy with love in every program, not hatred.

Lulubelle Ramsey
Charleroi, Pa.

The Dom DeLuise show had a tasteless sketch in which he pushed a man off a building in order to obtain his lunch. Hardly a laughing matter. There is too much casual killing on TV. Those people in a position to do so could help television show more reverence for human life.

Beverly Slater
Kalamazoo, Mich.

[All three networks have been starting to do just that in recent weeks.—ED.]

TEXAS ADDENDUM

Please remind Martin Maloney ["How to Win Wealth, Fame and Happiness in TV," June 15] that Texas was readmitted to the Union in 1870, and only 67 years thereafter we started teaching radio courses, slightly later adding television and film instruction of superior quality. Our radio/television/film department has a new expanded curriculum and is one-third part of a new School of Communication.

Stanley T. Donner

HOT TIMES

The TV news programs have shown me that America is no longer a melting pot—it's a pressure cooker.

Bill Lederle Jr.

COOLER SITUATION

All the females on The Dating Game tonight should have been arrested for indecent exposure.

A HARD DAY'S NIGHT (NBC), Saturday
WELCOME TO HARD TIMES (ABC), Sunday
HOT RODS TO HELL (ABC), Wednesday
THE HELLIONS (CBS), Thursday
I WANT TO LIVE! (CBS), Friday

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

Bless those Beatles who provide the one bright spot in a network-movie rerun week that is jam-packed with violence in a variety of times and places, from Wild West to Veld to California gas chamber. Bless baseball too for pre-empting the sixth movie spot that probably would have been devoted to more of the same.

The Beatles' first movie, "A Hard Day's Night," regarded by many as their best (I've a special fondness for "Help!" myself), introduced them and director Richard Lester to us at their freshest, zaniest and most charming. Take another look at those boys a mere four years ago (pre-swami, pre-super-psychedelics) and be refreshed if not reassured. Certainly—and not simply in contrast to the rest of the network-movie fare—their combined Marx Brothers-Mack Sennett approach to comedy, the sight and sound gag-gery, the sheer joyous pacing of their sense and nonsense offers relief and refreshment.

At very least "I Want to Live!" has social seriousness to justify its minute and harrowing exploration of a woman preparing to die in the course of what might have been a major miscarriage of justice. The film is also distinguished by Susan Hayward's Oscar-winning portrait of the real-life Barbara Graham. Admittedly guilty of everything from perjury to prostitution, she denied that she was a murderer but was executed after three stays of execution.

It is difficult to think of any excuse or justification for running, let alone rerunning, the rest of the week's films in these conscience-probing days (all that quick-switching of films about violence a couple of weeks ago seems to have been a fleeting bit of public-relations on the part of the programmers) beyond the fact that the networks contract to run each film twice in a season—so 'round we go again.

"Welcome to Hard Times" attempts the serious theme of a town destroyed twice, once by evil from without and the second time by a festering evil within. But the spirit of it all is embodied in Aldo Ray's bad man, who rapes and ravishes and murders and, shucks, even shoots his own horse. Hero Henry Fonda just looks blank-eyed and stunned throughout, as well he might.

Gambling, looting, murder and rape are again the glories of the game in "The Hellions," a cheapie "High Noon" set in South Africa circa 1850. After the glories the lawman takes over and the baddies get it in the guts.

The baddies are mere teen-agers in "Hot Rods to Hell," their victims an all-American family driving across the California desert. Significantly, this film was made for television (titled "52 Miles to Terror") but played double-bills and drive-ins until, apparently, television was ready for it. But we're not.

PRISONER

7:30 5 8 10 12

COLOR Will the Prisoner finally crack when his captors introduce him . . . to himself?

Patrick McGoohan, star and creator of this series, sees his character as an allegorical figure, corresponding to 20th-century man trapped in a dehumanized technological society. In this context, the question of personal identity is critical.

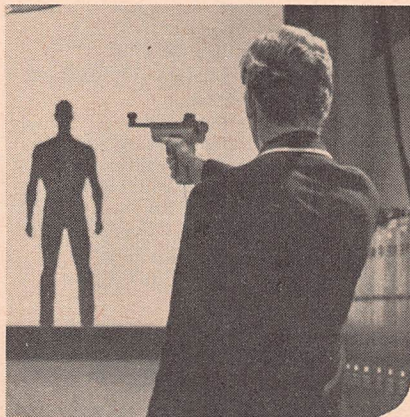

In a chilling sequence of events, Prisoner Number Six is drugged and physically transformed. He awakens to find that he has a new appearance and a new identity. Only his mind tells him who he really is—and there is an exact double of his former self to refute that idea at every turn.

Scriptwriter Terence Feely draws a taut portrayal of a man engaged in a desperate struggle to preserve his personal vision of himself. McGoohan plays the Prisoner and his double. (60 min.)

The Beatles made the screen scene in this 1964 film, using a brand of knockabout comedy placed "somewhere between the Marx Brothers and the Three Stooges."

To capture the Beatles' free spirit, director Richard Lester ("The Knack") and cinematographer Gilbert Taylor employed hand-held

BUICK OPEN

1:00 5 8 10 12

SPECIAL COLOR Play in the 11th annual Buick Open is telecast from Warwick Hills Country Club, Grand Blanc, Mich.

On Saturday and Sunday, cameras cover the final holes of the third and fourth rounds. A $25,000 first prize is the cream at the top of a $125,000 purse. Among those expected to compete is defending champ Julius Boros, who was one of only five pros to finish under par in last year's rain-marred tourney.

The par-72 course has been cut to 7001 yards, de-emphasizing the demand for power that made it the bane of many golfers. The fairways are of average width and fairly flat, and the ample greens are mildly rolling. Water is a minor factor, but there are 93 traps.

If there's a tie, cameras will cover the sudden-death play-off. (Live)

1.30 7 7 11 13

SPECIAL COLOR Action in the 16th annual U.S. Women's Open is telecast from the Moselem Springs (Pa.) Golf Club.

Cameras focus on the finishing holes as the links ladies close in on the $25,000 purse (first prize: $5000).

The par-71, 6232-yard course requires power and accuracy, especially on tee shots. The tall-grass rough makes golfers pay for errant shots. Most of the undulating greens are trapped, and water affects strategy on four holes.

Expected entrants include four-time winners Mickey Wright and Betsy Rawls, and defending champion Catherine Lacoste, the chunky young Frenchwoman who brashly shook up the ladies-golf establishment by coolly cruising to victory—the first amateur and first foreigner to capture this title.

Announcers: Chris Schenkel, Bill Flemming, Bud Palmer and Byron Nelson. If there's a tie, the 18-hole play-off will be joined in progress Monday at 4:30 P.M. (Live)

10:00 5 10 12 OF BLACK AMERICA

SPECIAL "The Black Soldier"—America's invisible defender—is the subject of this half-hour documentary, the second of seven programs surveying Negro history.

From its inception, this country has called upon the black man to help fight its battles. It has repaid him by erasing his contributions from the pages of its history books. Result: Few Americans know that black regiments charged up San Juan Hill with Teddy Roosevelt, or that black Cavalry troops helped win the West.

Producer Peter Poor has blended films and graphics to trace the heroic path of the black soldier from his participation in the Revolutionary War through the War of 1812, the Civil War, two world wars, Korea and the Vietnam conflict. The documentary also looks at attitudes toward the Negro soldier, from George Washington's reluctance to use black recruits, to Harry S Truman's official integration of the armed forces.

BIAS AND THE MEDIA

The National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders: "The world that television and newspapers offer to their black audience is almost totally white."

SPECIAL COLOR A one-hour panel discussion concludes this series' two-part analysis of bias and the media.

Two weeks ago, an all-black panel indicted the mass media, accusing the communications industry of consciously or unconsciously reflecting the prejudices of a racist society.

Tonight, an all-white panel of TV, magazine, newspaper and ad executives reply to the charge. At issue: What are the mass media doing to adequately represent all Americans?

The discussion centers on the token number of Negroes employed in the communications industry, and the quantity and quality of coverage allotted the black community.

On the panel . . .

Norman Cousins, editor, Saturday Review: "Excellent articles on race relations have appeared in magazines; most are after riots."

James Hagerty, ABC vice-president, who discusses all-black programming and network coverage of racial issues.

Herbert Kamm, editorial consultant for the Scripps-Howard newspapers: "A study of 300 papers found fewer than one Negro editorial employee per paper."

Elmer Lower, president of ABC News, who talks about his network's recruitment and training of ghetto youths.

Edward P. Morgan of NET's "Public Broadcast Lab": "It's time to stop examining the patient and start operating."

Daniel Seymour, president of the J. Walter Thompson ad agency, who discusses integration in TV commercials.

When the genie comes out of the bottle...

By Dwight Whitney

Earlier this spring Vogue magazine, the bible of haute couture, published a photograph of 18-year-old Penelope Tree, the American Twiggy and socialite daughter of Marietta Tree, onetime UN delegate, wearing a transparent Yves Saint Laurent black organdy blouse with absolutely nothing underneath, thereby setting a New York Times' fashion reporter's tongue a-clacking about a new era of "see-through women."

At about the same time in Hollywood, Cal., Hank Grant, a trade-paper TV columnist, came up with what—for Hollywood—passes as an equally mind-bending bit of information. He had, wrote Grant, been "battling" to induce NBC's Standards and Practices Department to rescind its "no-navel edict" against Barbara Eden, the star of I Dream of Jeannie, a fantasy about a pretty genie enamored of an astronaut.

As for the "battling," it was minimal, unless you're talking about Grant's battle to get a good story.

However, there was an edict—although not necessarily in writing—and has been ever since the show first went on the air three seasons ago. It called for Miss Eden to wear a surprisingly modest costume for an amorous haremite.

It consisted, according to its designer, Gwen Wakeling, of a minimum-cleavage bolero jacket of rose-colored velvet, harem pantaloons lined with silk to make them opaque, and an eight-inch girdle, also of rose-colored velvet, coming well above the waist to produce what Miss Wakeling calls "a conventional Hollywoodish version of an Oriental dancing girl"; i.e., no navel—thereby reaffirming the popular network belief that sexy young actresses are not really born of woman at all, but spring fully formed from the brow of Zeus, or possibly General Sarnoff.

On the other hand, Sidney Sheldon, the creator and executive producer of Jeannie, says that the decision to cover up represents his taste and his responsibility. "I'm not playing navels," Sheldon insists. "I'm playing boy-meets-girl. What makes Jeannie sexy is that she doesn't play sex."

Yet, like everything else in TV, there is an iron-fisted rationale at work here. I Dream of Jeannie is actually one of the most daring shows on TV. It is the only show, for example, in which an attractive unmarried girl has the free run of a bachelor's apartment.* Jeannie may be a creature of fantasy, live in a bottle and hence be exempt from some of the more rigid social conventions, yet her attitude toward her "lover"—if that is what he is—is quite sophisticated. He is her "master" and she his "slave," a relationship which, comic as it is, seems better suited to the Marquis de Sade than all those folks back in the Midwest who, the → *Next season there will be another. In NBC's The Ghost and Mrs. Muir, an unmarried wraith of a sea captain has the full run of an attractive widow's home.

ratings tell us, constitute some of Jeannie's most enthusiastic fans.

"We have to be careful," Sheldon admits. "We could bring down the Bible Belt on our hands with one line. Suppose we let Jeannie say, 'We're going out tonight, master,' and he replies, 'Oh, no we're not, we're staying home.' Millions of people would say, 'Oho, monkey business!' But that doesn't happen."

It is Barbara Eden, a telephone lineman's stepdaughter, who makes sure it doesn't happen. She is an extraordinary combination of glamorpot and lady. She has the supercharged physiognomy of which great beauties are traditionally made—the long Grecian nose, flaring cheekbones, dramatic slash of a mouth, hair swirling up, over and around a head placed regally on a superbly constructed body. But it is beauty with a difference. No self-appointed soldier in the grand old army of American sex symbols she; her sex appeal comes packaged in propriety. She sees herself as a somewhat plain but earnest girl who is lucky—and glad—to be working.

As a star of a successful TV series, she is known as "a bankable name" and as such is entitled to some temperament, and perhaps a fancy dressing room like Liz Montgomery, or a studio-donated $16,000 Ferrari two-plus-two like Sally Field. "She can have anything," Claudio Guzman, her line producer, says. "She asks for nothing. She dresses in an old trailer and thinks she's lucky to have that."

Then there is the purity of her self-doubt, a quality which filters through her performances and helps make Jeannie's peccadillos acceptable to conservative viewers. She is the kind who doesn't think she's really very good at anything unless she's studied it for 20 years. As a child in San Francisco she studied singing and dancing, and like every other kid, made drawings in school. "I hid the drawings," she remembers. "I was afraid they wouldn't be good enough."

At 15 she became a pop singer in local bands, but she tried to deny that talent too. She dreaded singing, thought she was no good at it, even though she was successful enough to finance her way to Hollywood with it four years later. So, being successful, she quit singing. "I was very shy, I really was," she explains. "And musicians are not kind. Girl singers cut musicians out of jobs. I found out it isn't how well you sing musically but whether you get the message across." Even 10 years later, after she had proved what a belter she was in half a dozen TV specials, she still wasn't entirely convinced she could carry a tune.

She had an identity problem too. Fox signed her for the movie "Peyton Place" back in 1956, gave the part instead to Terry Moore and cast Barbara as the colossally dumb blonde in the TV series How to Marry a Millionaire. She modeled her performance on her pet poodle, whose emotions, she says, were also "all on the surface." Actually, little emotion and even less girl were visible. The studio plastered her with a layer of makeup so thick that when TV GUME ran her picture, along with the other two girls in the show, it took a fingerprint expert to tell them apart.

Things became even more anonymous when the studio decided to put her in movies. "I was kissed, rescued and sung to," she explains, "by Pat Boone, Fabian, Frankie Avalon, Gary Crosby, Elvis—twice. I didn't get to cry often. It was very frustrating."

It took Jeannie to transmute Barbara into Barbara and make her into an instantly recognizable commodity. Guzman thinks he knows why. "She grew up," he says. "You look at her. You figure, well, just another pretty girl. Then you look again. Sure, she's got everything. But she ain't → shaking it. Then you look at the part. It's insipid. One of those cutesie-pie roles that's nowhere unless you've got the right girl. What she's got can't be faked. It is the real female-animal quality."

Maybe that was one of the reasons for nervousness in high places. "The network did everything to avoid the terrifying idea that Jeannie was cohabiting," muses Guzman. "But they hadn't counted on Barbara, her basic conservatism, her enormous good humor and self-discipline. When Larry Hagman was critical over some aspects of the series in the early days and nearly lost his job as a result, guess who consoled him and insisted that he was the right man? She puts up with people as a sister, mother, best friend. Even women like her.

"There is a marvelous directness about her. She calls it her little one-cylinder mind. 'How's your little one-cylinder mind today?' I ask. 'My little one-cylinder mind tells me something is not right,' she replies. Then she takes care of it."

Little mother? Well, not quite. There is another side to Barbara and it comes to light in the "basic conservatism" of her home life. She—like Jeannie—believes that the man should be the dominant figure. Barbara has been married for 10 years to a conservative-minded, stern-miened gentleman, the Lebanese actor Michael (Cochise) Ansara, who believes in a place for everything and everything in its place. Once he had a successful series himself. Now he works steadily in movies while wishing for a return to the halcyon days of Broken Arrow. "Yes, I do wish I had a series," he says. "It's steady. It's secure. People don't know you unless you're a superstar, and I am not the All-American-looking boy."

His wife is the superstar at the moment. It is he who "advises" on her career and administers the $250,000 they are reputed to make between them in a year. It is he whose wish it is that their son, Matthew, now almost 3, be properly dressed for visitors. It is he who loads the bookshelves with leather-bound sets of the "Encyclopaedia Britannica" next to "The Epic of Man," and "My Life and Loves," by Frank Harris. It is he whose oil painting, in which he has a dazzling technical facility, adorns the walls.

She calls him "Daddy," tells everyone she can't draw a stick, drives her Cadillac convertible faster than she should on the freeway, believes that child-rearing is more fun than a night on the town, and doesn't really much care what Penelope Tree is wearing this season. Instead she redid the living room in yellow—"a happy color," she says.

As for all that hot talk about navels—or lack of them: "No reason to fight with anybody," she declares. "What's to fight about? Argue with a genie in a bottle?"

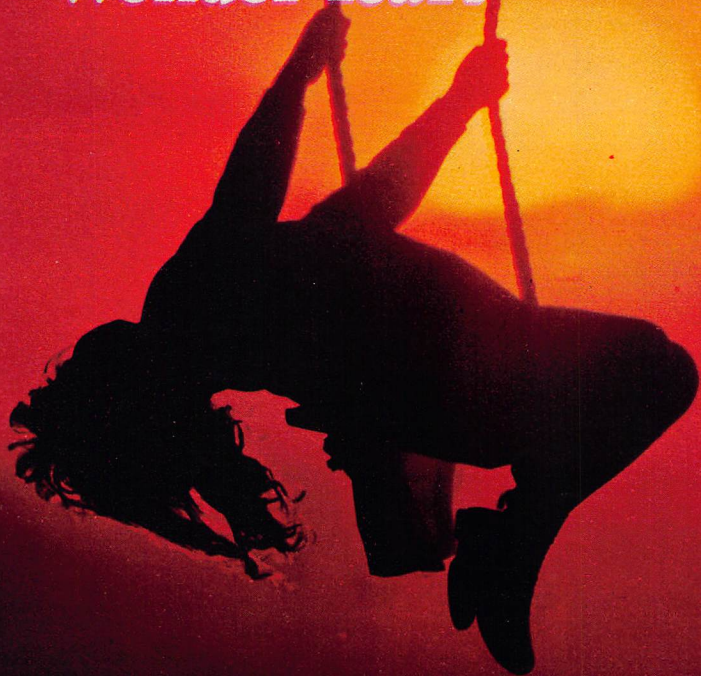

(END)

"What am I watching? I'm watching a disgusting woman, with obviously no breeding whatsoever, screaming, 'You have bad breath.'"

Clambake

on the beach or at home

TURN PAGE FOR RECIPE

Sunset at the beach after a day of clamming; hungry and ready for that wonderful feast of steamed clams. Add crusty bread, steamed ears of corn, melted butter and lemon juice for dunking, plenty of cold beer. No need to wait to have this treat; steamed clams can be prepared at home on top of the range, in the oven or on the barbecue grill.

AT THE BEACH

Dig a hole in the sand and line it with rocks. Build a kindling fire to heat the rocks to red hot. When hot, cover with wet piece of canvas and top with a layer of wet seaweed. Add scrubbed clams, allowing a dozen per person. Pull back husks on corn to remove silk, replace husks and dip corn in sea water. Allow 1 to 2 ears per person. Push corn into clams. Cover with a thick layer of seaweed. Cover closely with another piece of canvas. Hold down the edge of the canvas with rocks to seal tightly. Steam 30 to 35 minutes or until clams open (the time varies with size and quantity of clams). Mix melted butter with lemon juice,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup lemon juice to each cup butter. When ready to serve, remove top canvas and seaweed. Give each person a portion of clams, an ear of corn, melted butter and lemon juice, a chunk of crusty French or Italian bread, and beer that has been cooled in a net in the ocean or a picnic cooler.

ON TOP OF THE RANGE

Use a two-part clam steamer, or a colander set deeply in a large saucepan so that all holes are completely covered. Pour in about an inch of water. Place scrubbed clams in top part. (Cook corn separately.) Cover closely and cook over medium heat until water boils. Steam clams 15 to 20 minutes or until open. Serve as above. Drain the tasty clam broth from bottom of the pot and serve cups of it with the clams.

IN THE OVEN

Line a large roasting pan with foil, fill with water to 1-inch depth. Add 1 tbsp. salt and stir to dissolve. Add scrubbed clams and ears of corn. Cover pan with lid or piece of foil. Bake in a preheated moderate oven (350°F.) 20 to 25 minutes or until clams open. Remove foil and serve clams with broth drained from pan.

ON THE CHARCOAL GRILL

Prepare clams as directed for cooking on the range. Build a charcoal fire on the grill. When the coals are red hot, place filled container on the rack of the grill placed directly over the coals. Keep coals hot, adding more charcoal from time to time until water is hot enough to steam clams. Steam 15 to 20 minutes or until clams open. Serve with broth from bottom of pan.

THE PERFECT ENDING

For dessert to top it all off, try icy slices of watermelon, cool bunches of green grapes, ripe peaches and plums. And while the last glowing embers of the fire remain, spear pieces of pound cake and marshmallows on a stick or skewer and toast until lightly browned. Hot or iced coffee or tea, and the day will long be remembered.

Eat carrots and you get more than just good taste. You get the "plus" of Vitamin A.

Use Mazola Corn Oil and Mazola Margarine and you get more than good taste. You get the "plus" of polyunsaturates.

Mazola 100% Corn Oil does more than make light, crispy fried foods and tangy salad dressings. Mazola Margarine, whose major ingredient is liquid Mazola Corn Oil, does more than make toast, vegetables or lobster taste better.

Mazola, used in place of the more saturated fats, is a simply delicious way to help balance the fats in your diet with polyunsaturates.

It looks as though 20th Century-Fox is the latest Hollywood studio committed to make TV movies. Fox and producer ROBERT L. JACKS are making "Casino," a two-hour gambling story . . . And ADAM WEST, former Batman, may be seen in a TV movie. He plays an ex-adventurer in a modern espionage yarn, "The Girl Who Knew Too Much." It may be released to TV instead of theaters. NANCY KWAN plays the girl who.

When he gets time off from Peyton Place this summer, CHRISTOPHER CONNELLY goes to Europe for a film role in "And Then There Were Three" . . . # It's a great camera to take on vacation even if you don't go anywhere.

We figure everybody wants pictures of his vacation but nobody likes to lug a big camera along. So we made the Kodak Instamatic 104 camera the least to lug.

We also made it the least trouble to use. Just drop in the film cartridge and shoot. (Pop on a flashcube when you need more light.)

Another nice vacation thing. You can get color slides, as well as color or black-and-white snapshots.

Which all means, the 104 lets you go where you're going, free and easy, and still have great pictures of where you've been.
